

Lecturer, Johns Hopkins University

The Department of Biology at Johns Hopkins University seeks to appoint a Lecturer to start 8/15/11 to assist and teach in undergraduate lecture and laboratory courses in Biochemistry and Cell Biology as well as lead a year-long Oral Presentation Skills journal club course for Masters students. The successful candidate will have earned a Ph.D. in these or related fields, have research experience in both, be an experienced and dynamic teacher with exceptional interpersonal and communication skills, possess strong organizational skills, and enjoy interacting with students. The responsibilities of the Lecturer will include mentoring students, offering recitation sections, lecturing occasionally, designing problem sets, assisting in exam writing, maintaining course websites, integrating course content with laboratory exercises and in-classroom digital technologies, and attending to the administrative aspects of the courses. This position is a 9-month appointment renewable on an annual basis.

Please submit a cover letter, including statement of qualifications and particular interest in the position, curriculum vitae and three letters of recommendation in PDF format only by 7/20/11 to:

Search Committee, c/o Jennifer Wohl at jennifercwohl@jhu.edu
Department of Biology/Krieger School of Arts and Sciences/Johns Hopkins University/3400 N. Charles
Street/Baltimore, MD 21218

Web site: <http://www.bio.jhu.edu/>