

Part-time Lecturer Biology, Goucher College, Baltimore, MD

Goucher College, the first college in the nation to require students to study abroad, invites applications for a part-time lecturer to teach an upper level undergraduate course in biology for the spring 2012 semester. The course can potentially be in any area of biology and will consist of three contact hours of classroom time per week for the semester (14 weeks); scheduling is flexible.

Goucher College is a selective liberal arts college located in Towson, Maryland, twenty minutes north of Baltimore, MD. The college's strategic plan emphasizes environmental sustainability and international and intercultural experiences. Goucher College is committed to increasing the diversity of the campus community and encourages applicants that will fulfill that mission.

Requirements: The position requires the completion of a master's degree or doctorate degree in biology. The preferred candidate will have experience teaching at the college level, and will be able to demonstrate a commitment to undergraduate education.

To Apply: The review of applications will begin immediately. Interested applicants must apply online by August 1, 2011 at <http://goucher.interviewexchange.com/jobofferdetails.jsp?JOBID=26128> .

Please submit the following application materials online:

- CV
- Cover letter (highlighting teaching experience)
- A description of the potential course offering, including any prerequisites that would be stipulated
- Contact information for two professional references