

Part-Time Science Writer

MindSpec, a nonprofit research organization that studies neurodevelopmental disorders, is seeking part-time writers to conceive, produce, and maintain content for their website (<http://www.mindspec.org>). As part of a new initiative, writers will be primarily responsible for composing articles which explain autism research to a non-scientific audience.

Requirements:

Qualified candidates should have a minimum of two years experience writing about complex scientific topics for a variety of audiences, ranging from the general public to scientists. Candidates must have demonstrated the ability to gather and synthesize scientific information; write clearly, concisely and compellingly under tight deadlines; and respond effectively to editorial comments.

How to Apply:

Send letter of application, resume and copies of three work samples to job@mindspec.org.